AT A GLANCE

Overview

A Cumulus Home Equity Line of Credit (HELOC) lets you convert a portion of your home's equity into a flexible revolving credit line. During a 10-year draw period you can advance funds as you need them, pay interest only on the outstanding balance, and re-draw as you pay down principal. After the draw period, the outstanding balance converts to a fully amortizing 20-year repayment loan. HELOCs are ideal for long-running home renovations, funding education over multiple semesters, or as a standing reserve against larger unexpected expenses.

INTRODUCTORY AND VARIABLE APR

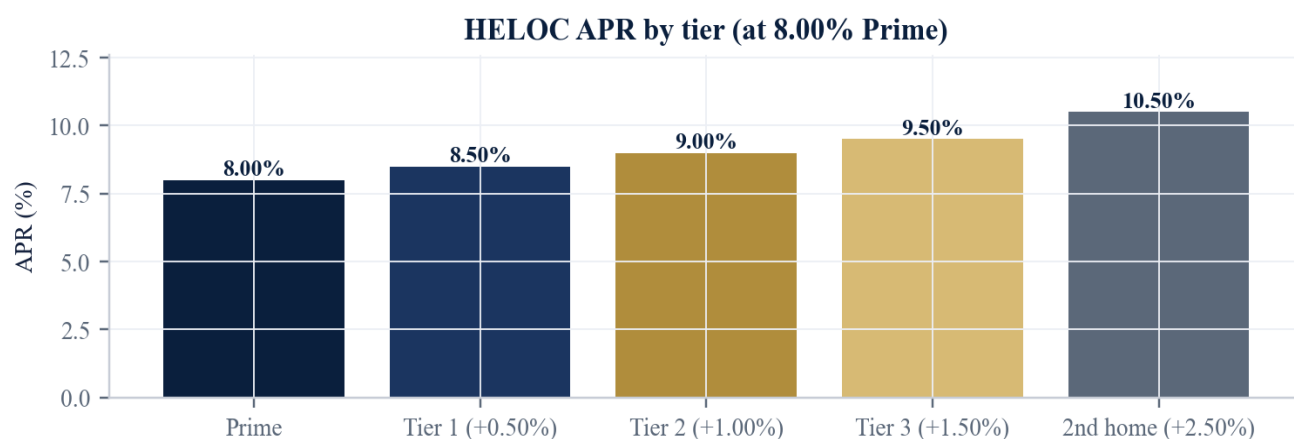

Rates and pricing

During the first 12 months after closing, the APR on your HELOC is a fixed introductory 6.99% on all outstanding balances. After the intro period, the APR is variable and equals the Prime Rate published in The Wall Street Journal on the last business day of each month plus a margin set at origination. The Prime Rate on the effective date is 8.00% APR.

PAYMENT DURING DRAW VS. REPAYMENT

During the 10-year draw period, the minimum monthly payment is the greater of $100 or accrued interest. At the end of the draw period, the outstanding balance begins fully amortizing over 20 years of principal and interest at the then-current APR. Your payment may increase substantially at conversion; Cumulus discloses the estimated payment on your Regulation Z disclosures.

COMMON QUESTIONS

Frequently asked questions

HELOC or HELOAN — which should I choose?

Choose a HELOC if you need flexible, revolving access over time and are comfortable with a variable rate. Choose a Cumulus HELOAN (home equity installment loan) if you have a one-time need, want a fixed rate and fixed term, and prefer a predictable monthly payment.

How is the 6.99% introductory APR applied?

For the first 12 months after closing, all outstanding balances accrue interest at a fixed 6.99% APR. After the intro period ends, the APR reverts to the variable post-intro APR (Prime + margin) for the remainder of the draw and repayment periods.

Can I convert some of my balance to a fixed rate?

Yes. Cumulus offers an optional rate-lock feature that allows you to convert up to 100% of your outstanding balance (or a portion) to a fixed-rate installment for 5, 10, 15, or 20 years. A $75 lock fee applies per conversion.

Do I need to pay closing costs?

On lines up to $500,000, Cumulus pays typical closing costs (appraisal, title, recording, flood determination). If you close the line within 36 months, the costs Cumulus paid are recouped from you at closure.

Is HELOC interest tax-deductible?

Interest on funds used to buy, build, or substantially improve the home securing the HELOC may be deductible under current IRS rules. Funds used for other purposes are generally not deductible. Please consult your tax advisor.
